Social Science Research Council (SSRC)

Mellon International Dissertation Field Research Fellowships [IDRF]

Support for social scientists and humanists to conduct 9-12 months of dissertation field research on all areas or regions of the world outside of the US. The IDRF program is committed to scholarship that advances knowledge about non-US cultures and societies grounded in empirical and site-specific research (involving fieldwork, research in archival or manuscript collections, or quantitative data collection). The program promotes research that is situated in a specific discipline and geographical region and is engaged with interdisciplinary and cross-regional perspectives. Winners must be admitted to doctoral candidacy to begin the award -- and by December 2016 at the latest. Fellowships must be held for a single continuous period within the 18 months between July 2016 and December 2017.

Approximately 75 fellowships of approximately $20,000 each will be awarded; there is no citizenship requirement. Application is on-line

Nicholson Fellowships for Research in the British Isles

Fellowships for up to 9 months (at $1500-$2000/month based on a submitted budget) for dissertation research to be conducted in the British Isles (including Ireland). Fellows must be admitted to candidacy to take up a fellowship of longer than 3 months duration and must demonstrate that they have also applied for non-University funding (e.g., Fulbright, SSRC, etc) to support the same project. Research must be completed in the British Isles, but need NOT have the British Isles themselves as a primary focus of research (e.g., work on African, South Asia, East Asia, North America or the West Indies that requires substantial research in the British Isles qualifies). Application is on the Web & must be filed both electronically and in hard copy.

New Generation China Scholars Program (University of Chicago Center in Beijing)

Open to PhD students in the social sciences and public policy in the U.S. and China. Successful candidates receive a modest stipend ($3000) and have the opportunity to work on their projects at the Center in Beijing, under the guidance of faculty mentors and in collaboration with fellow graduate researchers. During the 6-8 month project term, participants have access to workspace and other facilities and resources offered by the Center. For US based applicants, preference will be given to those who are already scheduled to be in China for field research. For the 2014-15 cycle, applications are invited that offer innovative approaches to the study of public goods (broadly defined) and governance in China. The Program will begin with a 4-day Orientation Seminar in late fall (November/December) and will include a colloquium, presentations by leading experts, individual meetings with faculty mentors and other advisers, and discussion with other program participants. At the conclusion of the program, participants will present their research findings at a 2-day Capstone Colloquium (May/June 2015). Each participant will produce a working paper for publication on the Center website and in a joint volume. Scholarship recipients will be expected to participate in both the Orientation Seminar and the Capstone Colloquium. During the intervening period, scholars will complete a research paper for presentation at the Capstone Colloquium and for possible publication. The research paper must be a part of or closely related to the applicant's doctoral dissertation.

American Councils for International Education ACTR-ACCELS Programs (NOT CURRENTLY FUNDED-but double check)

All of these programs are funded by the US Department of State, Program for the Study of Eastern Europe and the Independent States of the Former Soviet Union (Title VIII); application is thus restricted to US citizens and permanent residents. Relevant countries are: Belarus, Central Asia, Russia, the South Caucasus, Southeastern Europe, Ukraine, and Moldova. Fellowships include round-trip international travel, housing, living stipends, visas, insurance, affiliation fees, archival access, research advising and logistical field support in the field. NOTE: “Scholars in the humanities and social sciences are eligible to apply. While a wide-range of topics (listed on the web and easily accessible, take a look AMC) receive support each year, all funded research must contribute to a body of knowledge enabling the US to better understand the region and formulate effective policies within it. All applicants should clearly describe the policy-relevance of their work, be it in anthropology, literature, history, international relations, political science, or some other field.”

Research Scholar Program (More likely for FIELD WORK than pre-field research)

American-Israeli Cooperative Enterprise – Schusterman Israel Scholar Awards

$15,000 awards to doctoral candidates (US citizens only) writing dissertations related to Israel who intend to pursue academic careers. Awards may be used for tuition, books, living expenses, travel costs, and other expenses to enable dissertation research. Fellows must be admitted to candidacy, plan to do research primarily in original source material, and must show proficiency in Hebrew and/or Arabic (preference for Hebrew). This sounds like an award for field research with a preference for archival work, but our one winner was at the write-up stage and the project was essentially ethnographic with the usual library research component. It seems to be really for either field work or write-up
