

CSRPC Preceptorship Teaching Application 2017-18

Deadline: Monday, April 3, 12:00 noon

The Center for the Study of Race, Politics and Culture, which coordinates the major/minor in Comparative Race and Ethnic Studies (CRES), invites applicants for a yearlong preceptorship position during the 2017-18 academic year. The preceptor will work closely with up to 12 fourth-year students enrolled in the CRES major. The preceptor will be responsible for guiding students in preparation of a bachelor's thesis. In addition, preceptors will assist undergraduates earlier in their program, providing thesis advice and program support. The current payment for the CRES preceptorship is $7,500 for the year.

Qualifications

- Interest in and ability to advise in an interdisciplinary program devoted to the comparative study of race and ethnicity
- Excellent writing and editorial skills
- Teaching experience and a wide acquaintance with the University of Chicago
- Advanced graduate student status (admitted to candidacy) in Humanities or Social Sciences

Primary Responsibilities – Please see page 3 below for full description

- Reading, editing and supervising the writing of students' B.A. essays
- Leading a three-quarter sequence of courses helping students to find research materials and guiding them in academic writing skills
- Holding weekly office hours
