Economic Outlook Hong Kong – Supply Chain Disruptions, Risks to Recovery, and the Economies of Asia (Jan 26)

Two years into the global COVID-19 pandemic, the world economy has seen its ups and downs. Recently, disruptions to the global supply chain have caused massive challenges to the economies of Asia.

Although the supply-chain crunch has eased lately in most parts of Asia, the situation remains tenuous. Labor shortages are leading to fewer manufactured goods, and a rise in COVID-19 cases could threaten to undue much of the progress that has been made.

With so much uncertainty, what lies ahead for the economies of Asia in 2022 – and beyond? Find out at this year's Economic Outlook event in Hong Kong at 8pm tonight HKT.
