ART AND PANDEMIC

The End of Art

Is it the end of art or just the beginning? Before COVID-19, art permeated many aspects of our lives online and off. Now, during the pandemic, many museums and galleries are closed and the economy is contracting, restricting possibilities for the art industry.

The UChicago Yuen Campus hosted global art experts Alice Mong, Daisy Wang, and Paulline Yao to discuss topics such as growing an audience for art, government funding for the arts, and the burgeoning opportunity for virtual exhibits. The panel revealed silver linings and expressed their conviction that the art industry is resilient and will firmly emerge from the pandemic in one piece. Watch the recording here.
