Hong Kong Harper Lecture 2017 - Understanding and Preventing Conflict in a Data-Driven Age (May 13)

In the wake of recent ISIS attacks around the world, it is clear that terrorism and insurgency have the capacity to shape national and international politics. Moreover, ongoing conflicts in Syria, Nigeria, Afghanistan, Colombia, and elsewhere illustrate the profound repercussions of political violence for human welfare, the stability of governments, and economic growth. You are invited to join Ethan Bueno de Mesquita, AB'90 who will describe what leading social scientists have learned about the causes of conflict, the efficacy of attempts to reduce political violence, and the challenges associated with countering violent, strategic adversaries like ISIS.

Congratulations to Newly Admitted Students

The newly admitted students and their family members were warmly welcomed at the reception held on Apr 23 at the Center. A panel consisting of alumni, parent and current student shared their experiences and tips with the new admits, in preparation for their new journeys at UChicago. Special thanks to Mr. Zhang Haitao for sponsoring the event; and heartfelt thanks to all alumni leaders and interviewers who contributed to the admission process.
