This presentation includes highlights of a century of Oriental Institute (OI) fieldwork, research, and collections as well as their current projects and the recent reinstallation of the OI Museum. One hundred years ago, James Henry Breasted founded the Oriental Institute, and his legacy of intellectual innovation lives on at the OI today. They record, document, and preserve imperiled cultural heritage, and educate the public through their Museum displays, exhibitions, and programming. The OI was founded with a determination to look where others didn't, and they continue to offer new ways of thinking about what connects us and why, remaining committed to advancing their knowledge of the ancient Middle East.
