

Violence, Trauma, and Trauma Surgery

The theme for the 2017-18 lecture series, co-sponsored by the MacLean Center for Clinical Medical Ethics and the University of Chicago Trauma Center (Director: Dr. Selwyn Rogers Jr.), is the topic of Violence, Trauma and Trauma Surgery. These issues raise many ethical problems. For example, disparities in the prevalence of violence and in outcomes of trauma are based upon factors that include age, race, geography, insurance status, and socioeconomic status. Disparities also exist in the availability of integrated violence recovery services, vital services that the UChicago Trauma Center will provide. The emergency nature of interventions in the context of trauma means that decisions must be made with no prior doctor-patient relationship and often for patients who lack decisional capacity and have no available surrogate decision-maker.

Reducing intentional violence and preventing trauma will require both individual action and community engagement. Research is needed to reduce violence and trauma and to improve trauma care and patient outcomes.

As we look forward to the May 2018 opening of our new trauma center at UChicago Medicine, we have invited local and national experts and community leaders to discuss the ethical issues related to Violence, Trauma, and Trauma Surgery.

Springer Publishing will publish a book on violence, trauma, and trauma surgery based upon this lecture series. Dr. Selwyn Rogers and Dr. Mark Siegler will co-edit the book.

36 Years of MacLean Center Lecture Series

In 1981, under the auspices of the MacLean Center, Mark Siegler and Richard Epstein organized a yearlong interdisciplinary lecture series on Medical Innovation and Bad Outcomes: Legal, Social and Ethical Responses. The success of that initial lecture program demonstrated that there was great interest at the University of Chicago in creating a sustainable interdisciplinary forum to discuss health-related subjects with colleagues from across campus. Each year since 1981, the MacLean Center has organized an annual lecture series to examine the ethical aspects of one key health-related issue. Recent lecture series topics have included: Reproductive Ethics, Organ Transplantation, Pediatric Ethics, Global Health, Health Care Disparities, Medical Professionalism, Confidentiality, Pharmaceutical Innovation and Regulation, Health Reform, End of Life Care, and Neuroethics. In 2017-2018, our topic is Ethical Issues in Violence, Trauma, and Trauma Surgery.
