Free and Open to the Public

In the wake of the Great Recession, the marked increase in economic inequality in recent decades has become a topic of great public concern. This event, part of the Neubauer Collegium faculty research initiative on The Economy and its Boundaries, draws together scholars from across the social sciences and humanities to address the problem of capitalism and inequality. What is inequality? What are the causes of inequality? How does inequality work? What, if anything, should be done about inequality?
