The complex, puzzling, and multifaceted operation of political authority in the U.S. and across the globe has proven fruitful for empirical analyses of and theoretical reflections upon the state. Scholars are situating states in global contexts, probing the ways in which states stratify and classify populations, examining the variable construction of state boundaries, and better understanding the “sinews of power” worldwide.

Hosted by University of Chicago Professors Elisabeth Clemens (Department of Sociology), Bernard Harcourt (Department of Political Science and Law School), James Sparrow (Department of History), and Stephan Sawyer (The American University of Paris, History Department; 2013-2014 Neubauer Collegium Visiting Fellow), Ann Orloff (Northwestern University, Sociology and Political Science) and Kimberly Morgan (George Washington University, Political Science and International Affairs).

A conference of The State as History and Theory, a project of the Neubauer Collegium for Culture and Society. Cosponsored by the University of Chicago Department of History, Department of Political Science, and Department of Sociology.
